Seaboard Press, 2007. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .An inspirational tale of one family s love, devotion and faith When I arrived, I approached the figure in the wheelchair. I asked him who I was but my father-in-law did not recognize me. When I tried to help him, he became angry and violent. He tried to get out of his wheelchair and away from me. He yelled, -No! You are not taking me back to Germany! You are all Nazis! You are all trying to kill me.- Dad won a Bronze Star Medal for his service during WWII. It took three of us to get him outside to the car. Dad had his fists to me, a growl on his face and threatened to kick me. Then the swearing began . This is a book about the daily trials and tribulations of taking care of a loved one with Alzheimer s Disease. In this Journal I share the feelings of confusion, frustration, and blessings I experienced during my ordeal. I wrote this Journal both for myself and with the hope that it might help others deal with similar situations. It s important for caretakers to know that they re not alone, that others have experienced the same frustrations. Sometimes a caretaker feels very isolated-the world, after all, doesn t stop, despite the sense that your world is frozen in time. I m hoping that this book will offer comfort to those who find themselves in that world. In this Journal I record the little things I did, daily, to preserve my sanity and provide my father-in-law with as nearly a normal life as possible. It is a tale of thoughts, stories, anecdotes, as well as feelings of helplessness, guilt, happiness, and sorrow....
