Excerpt: . . . columns are full of cheap puffs and write-ups, or if the advertising columns are let out to sharpers, the publisher is not able to sell to the highclass advertiser the big thing that a publisher should be able to offer, that is, the interest and confidence of a large body of readers. As a result of the Insecticide Act of 1910, farming communities in particular are now receiving a much higher grade of insecticides and fungicides than formerly, according to the annual report of the Insecticide and Fungicide Board just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The improvement in the quality of these articles, says the report, encourages their use by farmers and is of great assistance in combating plant diseases and insect pests. In the year ended June 30, 1915, the Board collected 1, 117 samples, of which 118 were turned over to the Attorney-General with recommendations that proceedings be instituted for alleged violations of the law. Although the area where figs will grow in this country is extremely limited, in certain sections of Southern Mississippi this fruit grows so plentifully that its value is not appreciated and barrels of figs go to waste every year. Under the conditions that exist in dooryards and gardens the trees require little or no cultivation and the majority of owners eat a few, can a few for home o. and permit the rest to go to waste, except in localities where commercial canners l...
