Let IN be drawn perpendicular to the surface, and let CR be the direction of the refracted ray in air, as found by the construction given in Art. 47. Produce RC backwards to meet IN at R. The triangles CNR and CN R are similar: for the opposite angles at C are equal, and the angles at N and N are right angles. Hence the sides about the equal angles at C are proportional. Now $CN = -CN$. 4 This gives us another construction for finding the path of the refracted ray. Let IC be the incident ray. Draw IN perpendicular to the surface of separation. Divide CI into four equal parts. Along IN find a point R such that CR is equal to three of these parts. Join R C and produce it: this is the path of the refracted ray in air. We shall use this construction in the next article. 53. Image of Point under Water.--Refer back to Fig. 47. Suppose any two consecutive rays in the figure to represent the extreme rays of a pencil of light proceeding from the point A and entering an observer's eye after refraction into the air. Draw a similar figure on a larger scale: produce the refracted rays backwards, and determine the point at which they intersect in the water. This point is the image of A. You will find that it differs for different pairs...
