Where the undisputed acts of an inventor furnish evidence of the abandonment of his invention, his testimony upon the trial that he never did intend to abandon it, is entitled to very little consideration. Bcvinv. East Hampton Bell Co. 23 Where an inventor, after the rejection of his application, did nothing to amend or reverse the judgment of the Patent Office for ten years: Htdt that this delay could not be excused by the plea that as the rejection was wrongfully made, the delay was the fault of the commissioner, and not of the inventor. 26. 23 The continuity of two applications for a patent for the same invention is a question of fact, and not of law, and is to be determined by evidence. A technical withdrawal is not necessary to interrupt such continuity. To. 23 Where an inventor filed his application in 1852, which was acted on without delay, and rejected for a simple and intelligible reason, but instead of taking any steps to reverse the action of the office, the applicant withdrew all his papers, including the application itself, except a single drawing, and then, for ten years, permitted his invention to go into notorious public use: Hcldt that the application was abandoned. Ib, 23 In January, 1852, B. applied for a patent. His application was rejected in April, 1852. He did not appeal or apply for a re-examination. In May, 1852, he took from the Patent Office his...
