Knox of Pennsylvania: At a Mass Meeting Held in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia, Held Under the Auspices of the Manufacturers Club of Philadelphia, Saturday Evening, October First 1904 The great quadrennial period has arrived when the American people review their affairs and condition and determine through constitutional methods the personnel of their chief servants, the President and Vice-President, and the governmental policies under which they are to proceed during an equal period for the future. The two great political parties have presented platforms of principles, and candidates who are pledged, if elected, to administer the affairs of the Government in conformity thereto, and the people are now engaged in the solemn business of considering where they shall choose. It is indeed a solemn and important business and when decided will either advance or retard our progress, for it is impossible that so momentous a thing as the continuance or reversal of the fiscal, economic, foreign and domestic policies of the American people should have a neutral effect. The parties stand in very different attitudes towards the contest. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
